Mission Statement:

To celebrate and honor, through high quality interpretation and displays, the heritage of Conoco and the people who contributed to its success, long-term survival, enduring qualities and pioneering spirit.

Collections Policy:

The Conoco Museum is dedicated to the acquisition, preservation, and exhibition of materials relevant to the company's origin, development, people and products. The museum accepts only those materials that it intends to retain for its collections. Donated items may be used for the purposes of exhibit displays, research, and educational programs. Due to the high cost of processing and storage, the museum reserves the right to deaccession items that appear deteriorated, duplicated, or fall outside of the museum's mission statement.

Specific Areas of Collection:

Materials are acceptable to the extent that they are the best quality and condition available and are relevant to one or more of the following areas...

- Corporate History
- Working for Conoco
- Research and Development

Donations:

The Conoco Museum is actively seeking items to expand or complete deficiencies in the existing collection. Tax deductible donations may be given through the ConocoPhillips Heritage Museums, Inc.; however, the donor bears all responsibility for appraisals.

A written offer with a description of your object(s), its current condition and history of use and ownership, along with clear photographs or digital images can be sent to:
